Discussion

The Missouri Department of Transportation (MoDOT) annually distributes federal transportation funds provided under the current transportation bill, the Moving Ahead for Progress in the 21st Century (MAP-21) to cities and counties for transportation improvements. These funds are distributed through 4 local programs, one of which is the Congestion Mitigation and Air Quality Program (CMAQ). This program is designed to assist cities in attaining federal air quality guidelines, awarding projects that have a demonstrated effect on reducing emissions.

The City of Kansas City was recommended as a subgrantee for this grant funding opportunity by MARC, in support of the purchase of a EV ARC charging system, which is the world's first and only fully autonomous, transportable, solar-powered electric vehicle charging system. This EV ARC charging system is transported from site to site in a trailer, which allows for easy off-grid deployment for large-scale events. This equipment will see immediate use and emission reduction with the upcoming FIFA World Cup events and celebrations.

The purchase of this equipment is also supportive of the Office of Environmental Quality's Climate Protection and Resiliency Plan, furthering Strategy E-2 goals of achieving carbon neutrality through investments in solar renewable energy and strategies to improve Kansas City's energy supply and Strategy M-5 promoting electric vehicle adoption and expanding the charging network.
